

Louisville's Horticulture and Forestry Advisory Board Presents a Lecture Series on:

EDIBLE LANDSCAPING ON THE FRONT RANGE

March 31, 2011 (6:30-8pm) —

TREES FOR COLORADO - Jim Ord

is the Rocky Mountain regional representative with J. Frank Schmidt & Co., one of the industry's largest tree growers. Jim holds a wealth of knowledge about trees and will talk about which trees are best suited for the Front Range.

Chris Lichty, Louisville City Forester, will add to our evening and speak about tried and true varieties of fruit trees as well as update us on current insect and diseases currently hitting front range trees.

April 5, 2011 (6-8pm ) — VOLUPTUOUS VEGETABLE VARIETIES FOR THE FRONT RANGE — Carol O'Meara is a

gardening enthusiast in Boulder County where she works as a Horticulture Entomologist for Colorado State Univ. Extension. Her gardening articles appear in the Denver Post, Colorado View Mag., Edible Front Range, Boulder Camera, Longmont Times Call, and Loveland Reporter-Herald. Read her blog at gardeningafter-five.wordpress.com. Come learn which vegetable varieties promise delicious flavor and produce well with our short growing season and intense sun.

June 16, 2011 (6-8pm) — DEALING WITH THE UNINVITED
GUESTS (PESTS) OF THE GARDEN — Carol O'Meara will return to discuss what pests and or diseases to look for in our gardens, how to prevent them or best deal with them. We grow our own veggies for better health, so learn how to deal with unwanted pests all the while keeping your garden healthy.
